RALEIGH IN BRIEF.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS IN AND AROUND THE CAPITAL.

Short Items of News Gathered on the Fly by the Chronicle's Reporters.

Will you be there to-night. Let everybody go to the township primaries to-night. The vegetation is again coming to the front. It ranks high, and is very rank. One convict was received at the penitentiary from Duplin county yesterday. The fruit statistician has reported that the average sale of watermelons in Raleigh is 2,700.

The sanitary inspectors of the city visit and report the condition of about two thousand lots every month.

No steps have been taken to secure a new census enumeration of the city. If one is not taken Raleigh will go on record as a town of 10,500 inhabitants. If There was a misapprehension in the statement that Mr. Billings, the efficient Hotel Claiborne and will be "mine host" at that already popular stopping place.

Mr. J. J. Rogers, of Wake county, who is now acting as superintendent of succeed with it. the colored Farmers' Aliance of North Does'nt that le Carolina and Virginia, spoke at Rham-katte Thursday. His subject was "The hopeless undertaking, does nt it? When Alliance and the Race Problem." Chief of Police Heart says that the prosperity. dog census in Raleigh has decreased faster than anything he ever saw here. Formerly a visit to the homes of many colored citizens—some white ones too— would show half a dozen dogs lying around the house. But when the col lection of dog tax began to be rigidly enforced, dogs began to vanish like frost before the sun.

Until the recent rains it was confidently expected that Raleigh would have a bale of new crop cotton by August 15th. Wet weather has had a tendency to delay the opening of cotton, and the chances now are that the old record, (August 17th) will not be beaten. It may be well to keep in mind the fact that the first bale which comes in this season will get a prize of ten dollars. That is equal to two cents a pound.

Cne gentleman brings the city census far below the census enumerators' estimate. He says that during an exciting prohibition campaign, nearly or quite every voter in the city was registered. There were thirteen hundred of them. Each voter represents five people. This makes the population of the city 6,500. How does that strike the municipal public. If there are no more people than lie. If there are no more people than that, Raleigh deserves more credit for progress and enterprise than any city on the globe.

Registration of Fine Raleigh Horses,

Captain B. P. Williamson, of this city, registered this week with the Wallace Trotting Register Co., 280 Broadway, New York, ten standard bred trotting colts, being a number of the young horses, for this season, from the rich and beautiful Fairview farm. The CHRON-ICLE has seen these young horses, has looked up their pedigree and it ventures to say that the colts from Fairview will equal any that shall come from any place in Kentucky, California or anywhere else. They are beauties; lithe and clean limbed, proud and ambitious looking, but withal as gentle and docile as horses may be. The CHRONICLE banks on "Fairview," and from the day of the first sale there, it will rank with the leading and famous farms of this country.

A FEW TRYING TO PULL THE MANY ALONG.

He Tells How Thirty People Faithfully Try to Pull the "Ten Thousand" City Up to the Top---Raleigh is the dow in a second story corridor of the postoffice yesterday. The thumb of his left hand was stuck in the armhole of his vest, and between the first and second fingers of that same hand lightly rested an elegant eigar, the blue smoke curling dreamily and lazily upward. The rain was falling and there was a meditative, far-away look in the Rambler's eye. He was aroused from his reverie by a Reporter, who greeted him with a "goo"

"Huh! How yer! Say, I was just thinking that there could be such a thing as a few trying to pull the many along, and I believe there is. You know the general idea is that the FEW make the MANY pull them along. That's true, too, considered in a certain light. The best illustration I have seen of the latter proposition is in the opening chapter of Edward Bellamy's "Looking Backward," where he compares the world to a stage

Again it has been my good fortune to visit within the circle of these beautiful mountains, and I can consistently declare that nowhere in America have I found a sweeter or more restful spot than these springs.
